Telekinesis some abilities cannot be explained.

Nina Kulagina, Eusapia Palladino, Swami Rama and Miroslaw Magola are some of the famous people who have claimed and demonstrated telekinetic abilities – Wikipedia source –

Nobel Prize laureates Albert Einstein and Brian Josephon and co-author Fotini Pallikara-Viras proposed that both psychokinesis and telepathy might be explainable using quantum physics. Their scientific paper "Biological Utilization of Quantum Nonlocality" stated that earlier researchers were correct in the conscious and creative mind's potential to affect the statistical outcomes of quantum phenomena.

Then there is the longstanding notion that our minds are mostly underutilized wonder machines. It is widely believed that we only use roughly ten percent of our brains. This would suggest that the untapped 90 percent is a realm of extrasensory powers and abilities, making it seem as if every human is simply a frustrated X-man.

There are two basic metrics researchers use to describe measuring the effects of supposed psychokinetic effects during experiments, Micro-PK and Macro-PK. Micro-PK requires scientific equipment to observe the manipulation of atoms, molecules and subatomic particles. Macro-PK describes any large-scale effect that can be seen with the naked eye.

Haakon Forwald, a Swedish electrical engineer, promoted the idea that a person could manipulate gravitational fields by mentally agitating the atoms and neutrons inside an object. Gerald Feinberg, a Columbia University physicist, futurist and author invented the idea of the tachyon, a theoretical particle that moves faster than the speed of light and could, possibly, explain psychokinesis.

Dr. Michio Kaku is the author of several widely acclaimed science books, including Parallel Worlds, Visions, Beyond Einstein, Hyperspace and Physics of the Impossible, the basis for his Science Channel TV show, Sci Fi Science: Physics of the Impossible and the host of two radio programs, Explorations and Science Fantastic said in his latest work, The Future of the Mind, uses his brand of theoretical physics – a beguiling mix of quantumness and consciousness – to push past the current frontiers of neuroscience. The worlds media spoke with this bravely unusual mind about where today's most daring scientific research is taking our brains. Our sit-down adventure included storied science notions like telekinesis, implantable knowledge, memory erasure, and even sentient robots.
